SHANGHAI INTRO

SHANGHAI LOCALES

Shanghai blends history, modernity, and style like nowhere else.

Shanghai, along China's Yangtze River Delta, is a vibrant world city linking East and West for centuries.

Split by the Huangpu River, Puxi holds historic landmarks like The Bund and the Former French Concession (now Xu-hui), while Pudong's glass-and-steel skyline features icons like the Oriental Pearl Tower and Shanghai Tower, plus a 25km riverside green belt to Qiantan's luxury precinct.

Beyond the tourist sights, the neighborhoods in Puxi pulse with creative, fashion-forward energy. In Xuhui, Anfu Lu and Wukang Lu are weekend stages for influencers posing by art deco facades.

Changning's Yuyuan Lu is lined with hip cafes, restaurants, and retail, while Zhongshan Park buzzes from Tai-chi at dawn to "dancing aunties" at dusk.

Suzhou Creek's riverside promenades now replace its industrial past, dotted with galleries and cafes such as Fotografiska.

West Bund's former wharfs and airport site offers miles of riverside paths that past museums + galleries and lifestyle venues of course peppered with brand new retail. Scenic, cheap ferries connect both sides from multiple piers.

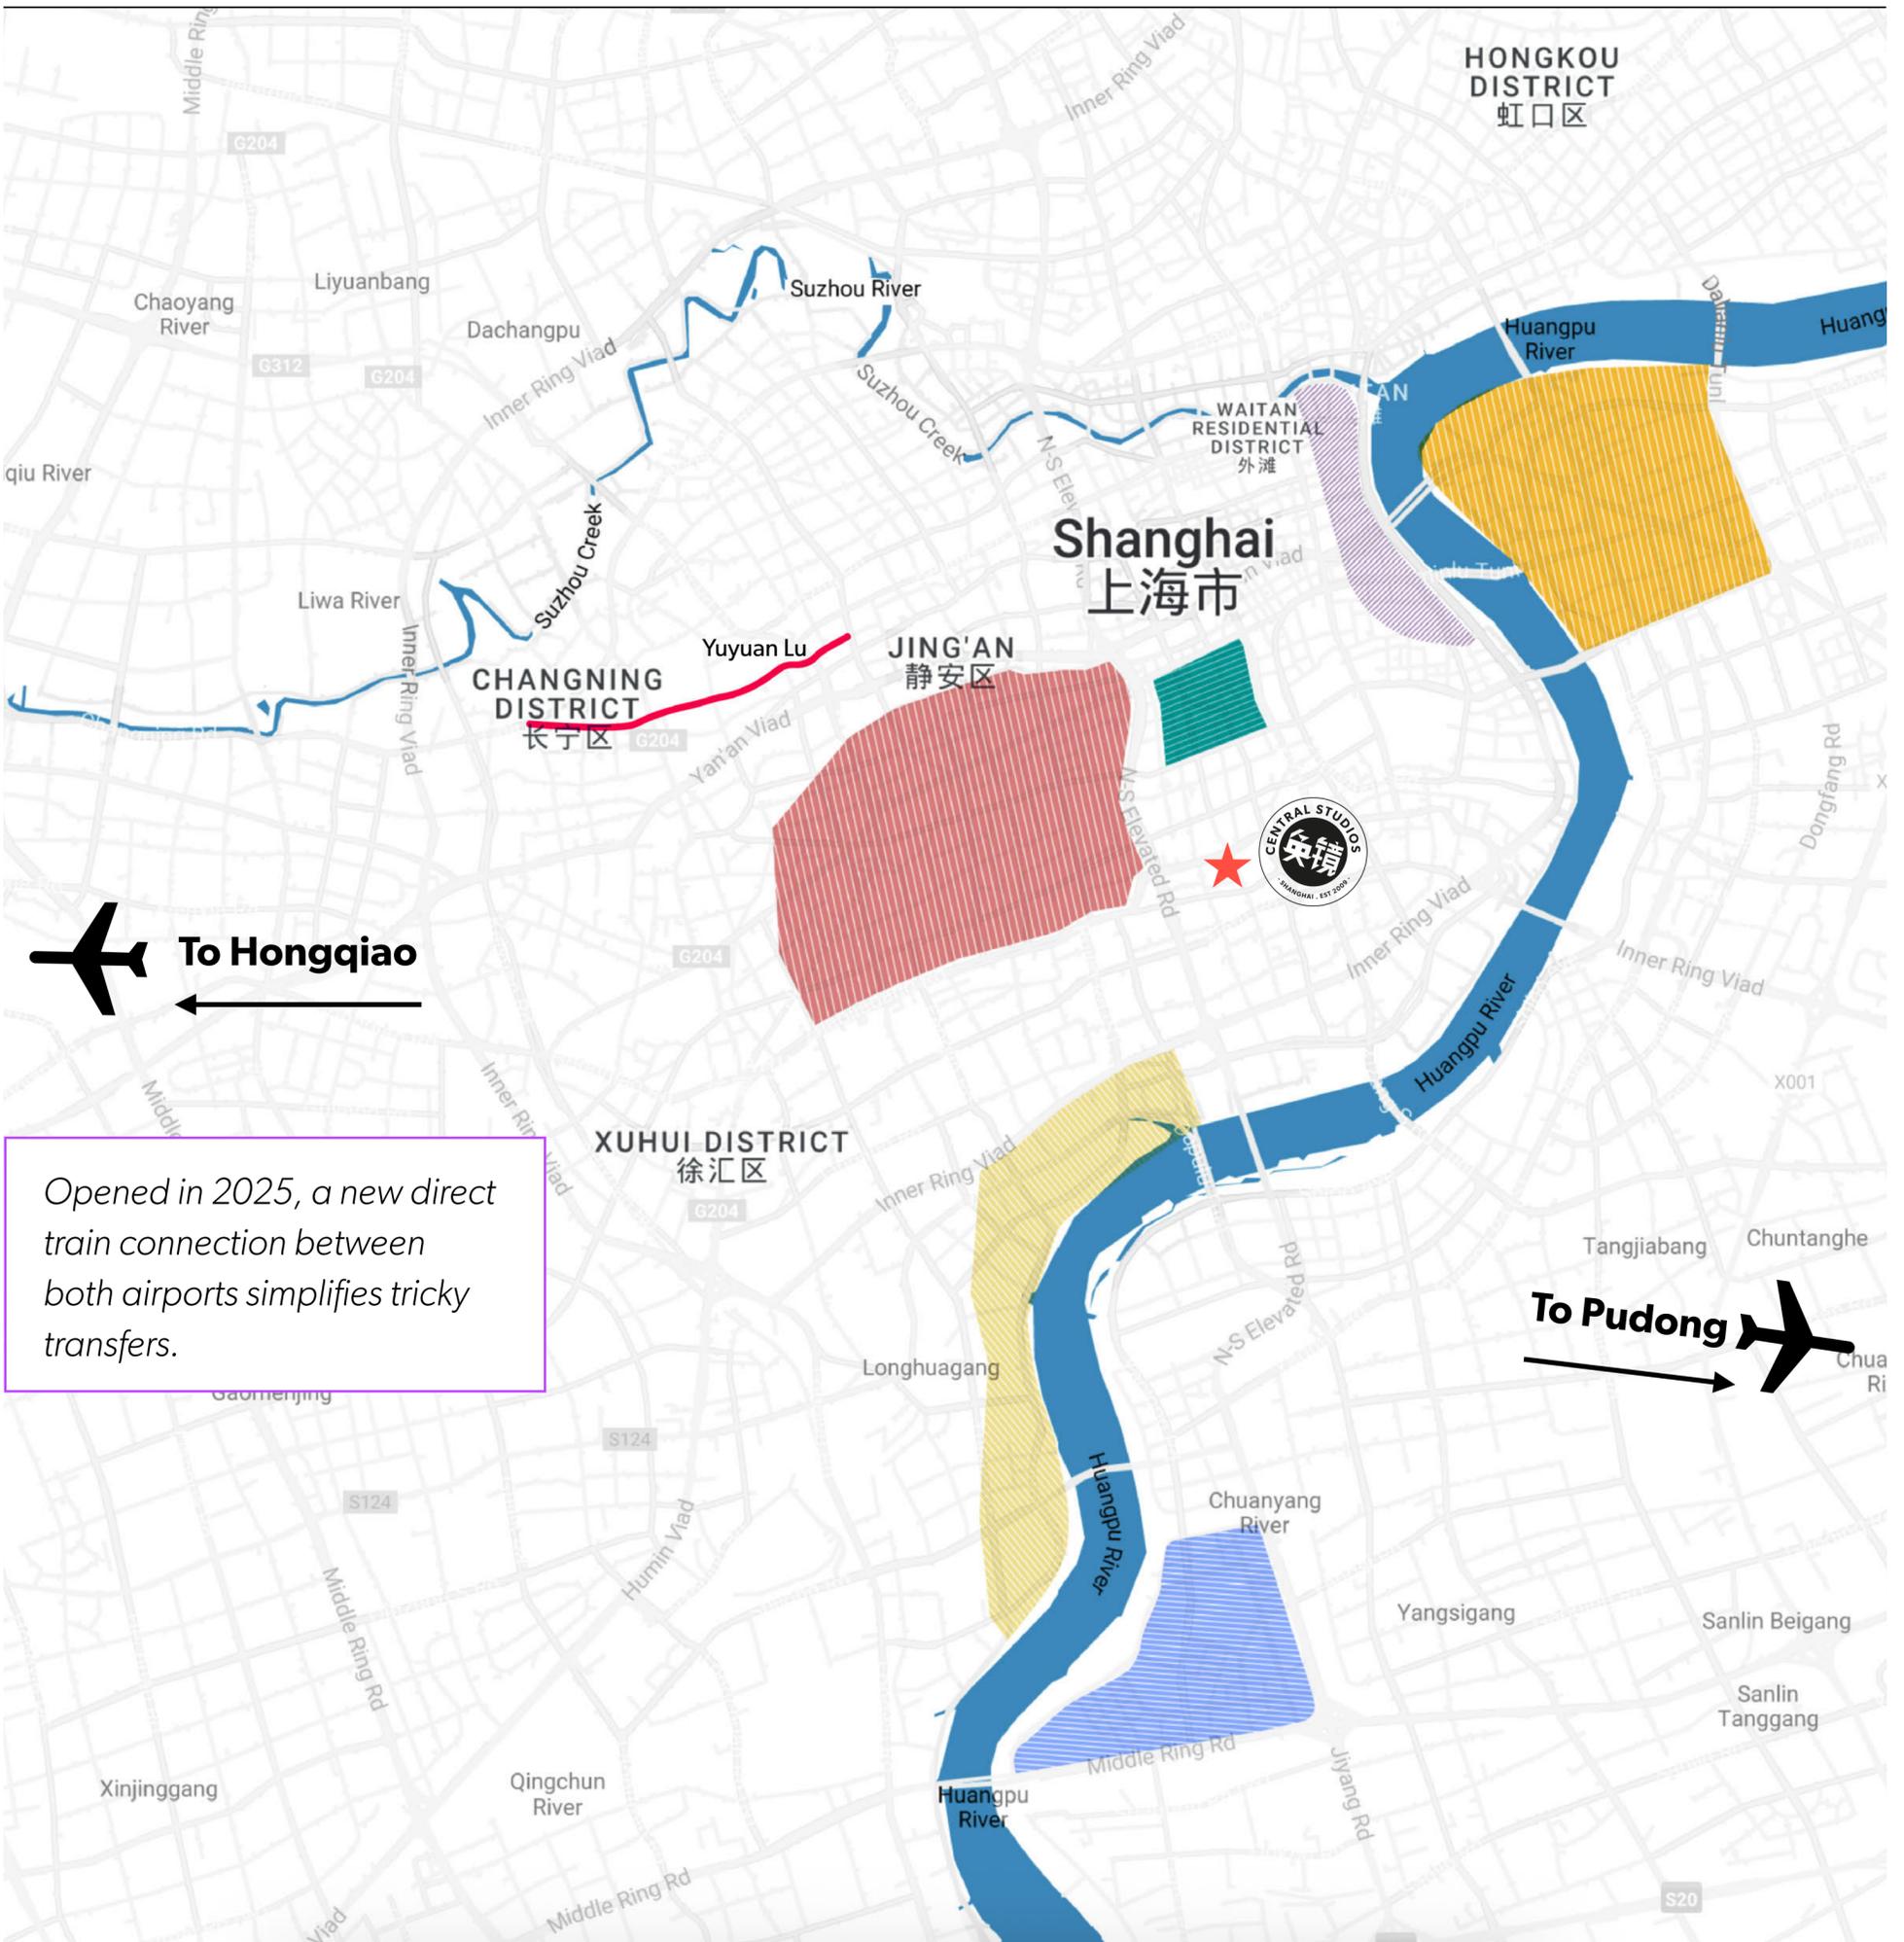

The Chinese word for Road is Lu. For example Nanjing Road is said Nanjing Lu.

MAP OF SHANGHAI

Running east-west is the revitalized Suzhou Creek ending in the Huangpu River. This magnificent transformation has walking and bike tracks along the length of both sides. New precincts are always opening up and the city keeps growing.

THE BASICS

AIRPORTS & TRANSPORTATION

We are thrilled that more and more of our clients, partners and friends are traveling back to China for work, business and pleasure.

Pudong International Airport (PVG) is the primary hub for international flights, located approximately 30 kilometers east of downtown Shanghai, around a 40 to 50 minute drive from downtown.

Aside from road, there is also the Maglev train, a high-speed magnetic levitation train, which reaches speeds of 431 kph. Unfortunately at the end of the ride you need to transfer to taxi or local metro which ruins the illusion of getting to the city quickly. But take a ride and get a selfie in front of the speedometer.

Hongqiao International Airport (SHA)

located closer to the city center, about 13 kilometers west of downtown Shanghai. It primarily serves domestic flights and some regional international routes. The airport is preferred for domestic flights and international whenever possible.

A car will take around 30 minutes to downtown and the airport is well-connected to downtown Shanghai via Metro Line 2 and Line 10, with a travel time of about 20-30 minutes.

Hongqiao Railway Station

is the adjacent to Hongqiao International Airport. It is one of the largest railway stations in China, serving as a major hub for high-speed trains. It connects Shanghai to various major cities across China, including Beijing and nearby cities like Hangzhou and Nanjing, which can be reached in around an hour or so.

Other stations include Shanghai Station and Shanghai South - so double check all tickets and stations.

ELECTRICITY

TYPE I

In China, the standard voltage for electricity is 220 volts at a frequency of 50 Hz. The power outlets typically accept two types of plugs: the Type A (two flat parallel pins) and Type I (three flat pins in a triangular pattern).

It's advisable for travelers to always carry a universal adapter, however most power points are designed to accept multiple different types of plugs.

Additionally, travelers should check if their electronic devices support the 220V voltage; if not, a voltage converter may be necessary to prevent damage.

VPN

Many western sites and online services such as Google, Facebook, Instagram are blocked in China. A VPN is recommended to ensure smooth surfing.

SIMPLE LINK

Simple VPN is a reliable VPN service with desktop and mobile apps that generally allows good connections for international and local sites.

www.simplelink.app

*To ensure a smooth digital journey, secure your VPN before you take off for China.

TAXI

As a local alternative to Uber, DiDi provides a range of app-based transportation services, including taxi hailing, private car hailing, social ride-sharing and bike sharing, designated driving, and on-demand delivery services.

An English version is available and make sure you link it up a payment method.

MONEY & PAYMENT METHOD

Cash is certainly not king in China. Most transactions are done by using mega-apps WeChat or Alipay for digital payments with QR codes at every cash register and check out.

Many stores don't accept cash anymore; and if they do may struggle to give change. Foreign credit cards are not accepted widely, so if you can, set up your Alipay or WeChat by linking your credit cards for ease of getting around and about.

Food delivery, transport and bike sharing apps are all linked and usable through these two mega-apps.

ALIPAY Highly Recommend for payment

WECHAT
The everything App, best for communicating

APP | ALIPAY

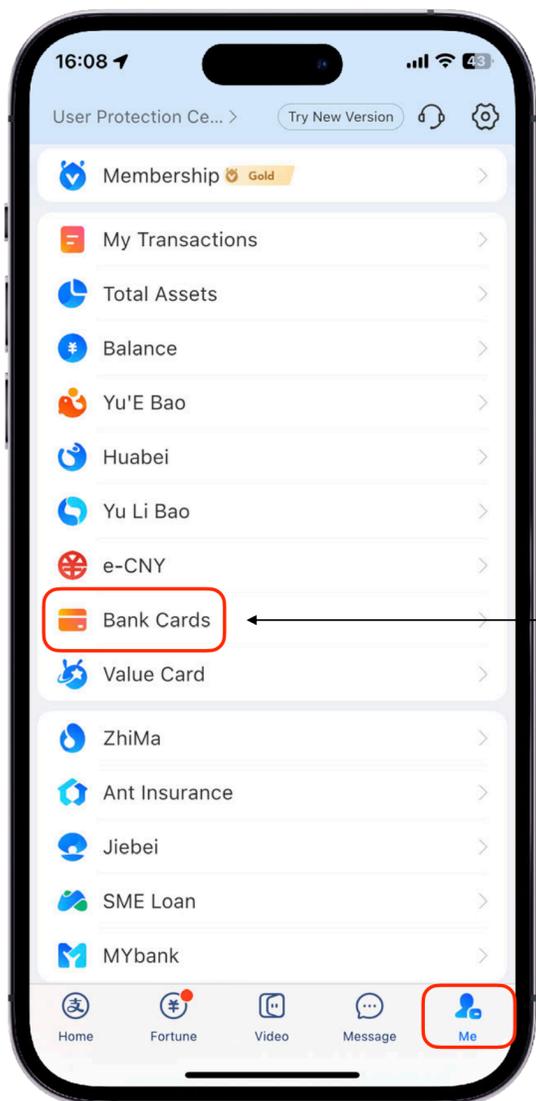

01 Download Alipay and Sign Up with Your Phone Number

Get the latest version of the app from your app store or download at Alipay's website

There's just one Alipay app, you will get an English "International Version" if your App Store region is outside of China. And you could always changed the language if you somehow get a Chinese version. The English version has limited features but can certainly use the most popular services.

After you installed the app, follow the registration steps with either a local Chinese or foreign phone number. Using a foreign phone number will also automatically register you for the International Version.

02 Add Your Bank Card

Tap "Me" in the bottom-right corner, then tap "Bank Cards".

These foreign cards are currently accepted:

- Visa Card
- Diners Club
- Master Cards
- Discover

03 Make Payments

Your bank card now appears in the "Bank Cards" section. With that, you can make purchases with your phone just about anywhere in China.

There are two common ways of paying with Alipay:

If are you are presented with a QR code, tap the "Scan" button to scan and pay. This is more common in smaller shops and local venders.

Most restaurants and supermarkets will scan your QR code. Just tap the "Pay/Collect" Icon and present the QR code that shows.

If you take a bus, tap "Transport". It will switch cities automatically based on your location.

Alipay will also now be an automatic option for payments within mobile apps like Didi, Meituan, and Taobao. Once you've downloaded and registered these apps, the built-in system will ask and help you to link to your Ali App.

APP | WECHAT

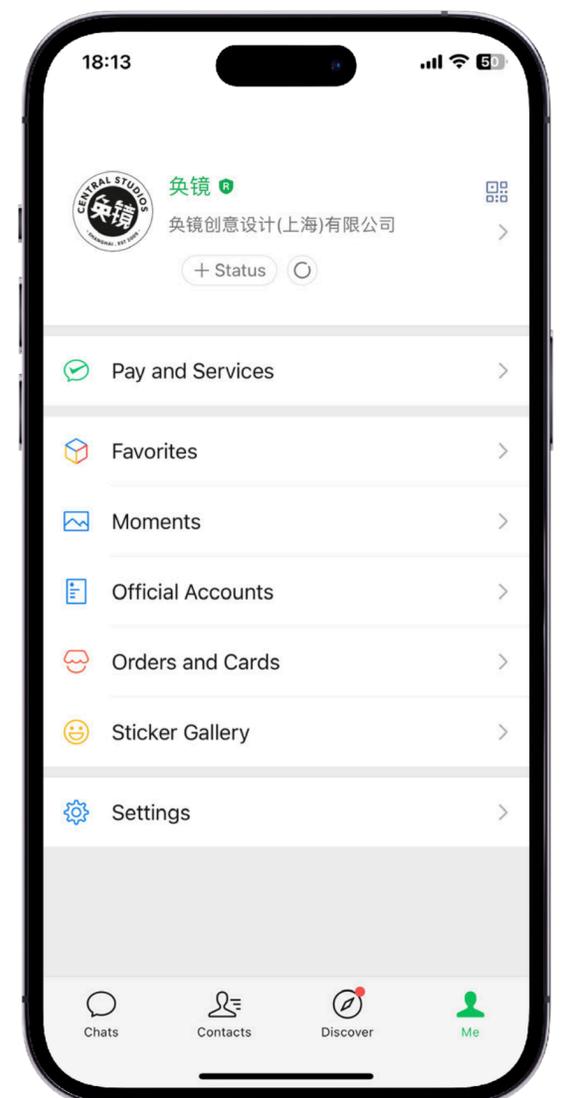

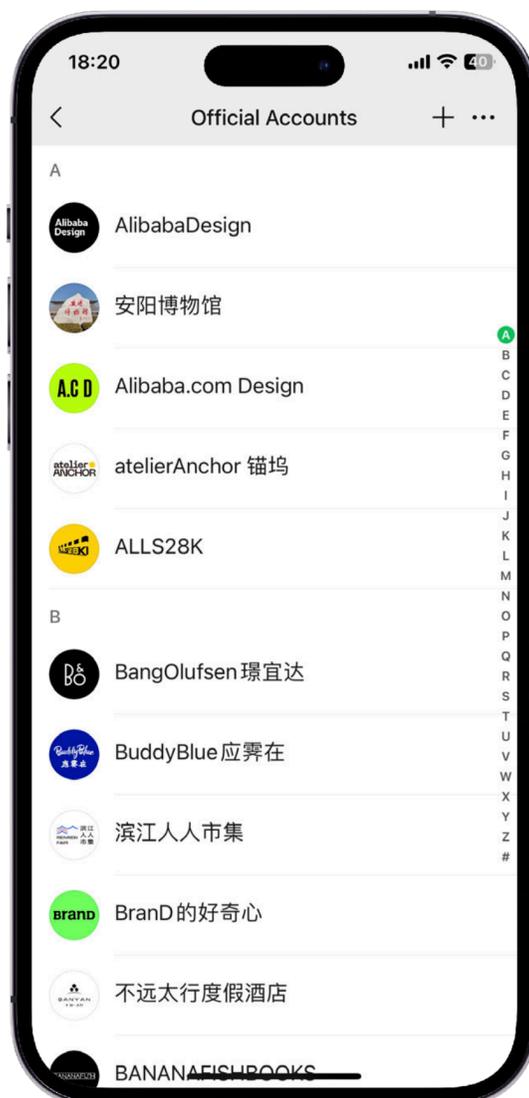

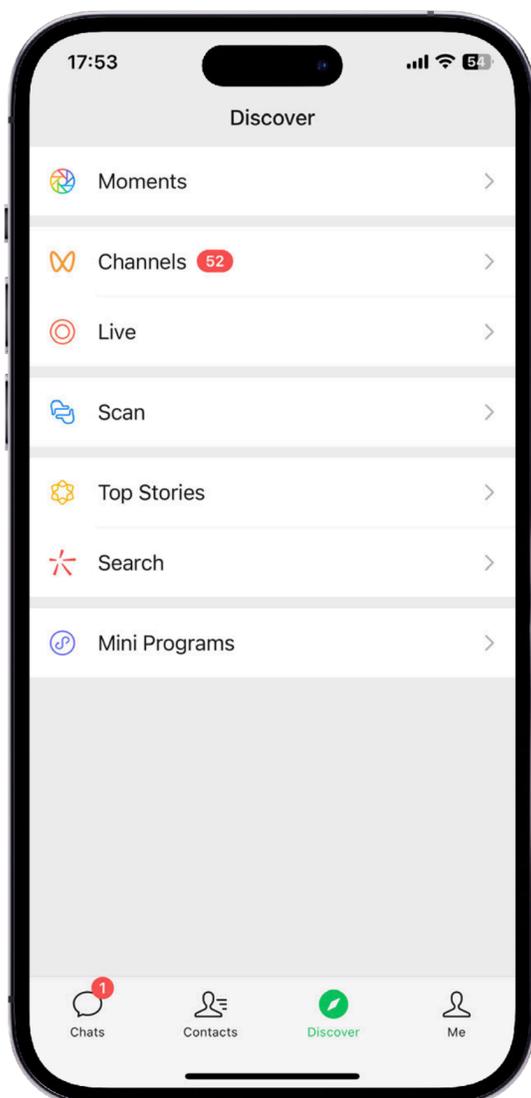

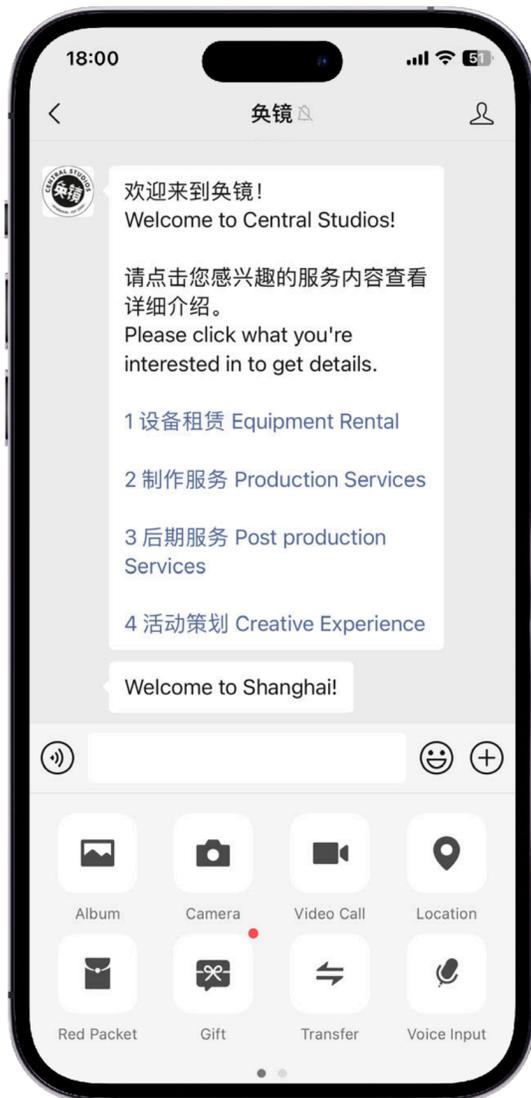

This is the essential Mega-App to have in China that enables quick communication, location sharing, links to restaurants and money transfer / payments.

The main features of this app are:

- Instant messaging that allows easy photo sharing, document sharing and other useful info
- Group chats
- Voice and Video calls with individuals or groups.
- A “moments” feed to see what your community is posting about
- Official Company accounts to follow brands and business you like
- P2P payments and also payments for good and services
- Food ordering at many restaurants by scanning on-table QR codes
- Connection to loads of other services

If you don't have WeChat enabled in China, you won't get the full experience of life in China

ART GALLERIES

ART GALLERIES

The Shanghai art scene is well represented with major museums as well as an abundance of commercial galleries. While many of the major institutions are towards the riverside, the commercial galleries are dotted throughout Xuhui, towards the Bund and Suzhou Creek.

Many of the city's most prominent museums are housed in striking contemporary spaces that reflect Shanghai's rapid urban evolution. These institutions showcase a range of exhibitions—from avant-garde installations to retrospectives of modern Chinese masters—often bridging Eastern and Western art histories. Their programs are ambitious, drawing both international attention and fostering a vibrant dialogue within the local art community.

Meanwhile, Shanghai's commercial gallery scene offers a more intimate and experimental counterpoint. Independent spaces tucked into lane houses, renovated warehouses, or minimalist storefronts present emerging artists alongside established names. Many areas have evolved into creative hubs for viewing art but also for cultivating it—with studios, pop-ups, and artist-run initiatives contributing to a dynamic, ever-changing cultural landscape.

ART GALLERIES

ShanghART Gallery offers a rare window into China's most influential and boundary-pushing contemporary artists, from pioneers to emerging voices.

Visiting the gallery is to experience the evolution of Chinese contemporary art firsthand, within one of Asia's most respected and internationally connected art spaces.

ShanghART Gallery has three locations in Shanghai.

SHOPPING & LEISURE

LEISURE

SHOPPING & LEISURE

While retail culture in China is mainly mall based, Shanghai has pockets of vibrant street culture with street front doors and lots of revitalized precinct developments housing plenty of options for coffee, bars, food, fashion & lifestyle.

Right in the heart of Jingan, Nanjing West Road is akin to the Champs Elysees of Shanghai. Every luxury marque has a supersized flagship stores all vying for the luxury dollar with next level brand experiences. Generally prices are more expensive than other countries, but trade is brisk.

However, seek and you shall find. Strolling through the eminently walkable streets you are bound to find bursts of creative style with stunning shop fit outs and unique products.

YU Garden

Yu Garden is Shanghai's oldest area that is currently caught between massive redevelopment and historic preservation. Unfortunately the neighborhoods around here are largely being demolished, but there is still some interesting things to see. Although a tourist Mecca, strolling through the jiangnan-style Yu Garden, is a surprising retreat from the bustle of the specialty and traditional snack shops outside.

BUCKET LIST

When we travel we love getting into the fabric of the city, but there are some tourist attractions that are simply too magnetic to pass by.

Shanghai Disney is arguably one of the best Disney's on the happy planet. Ever expanding with awesome rides, you're never too old for a visit.

Nearby retail outlets can offer a welcome respite and a different kind of therapy. Both of these venues in the Pudong airport vicinity so can offer a cool option on your last day in town.

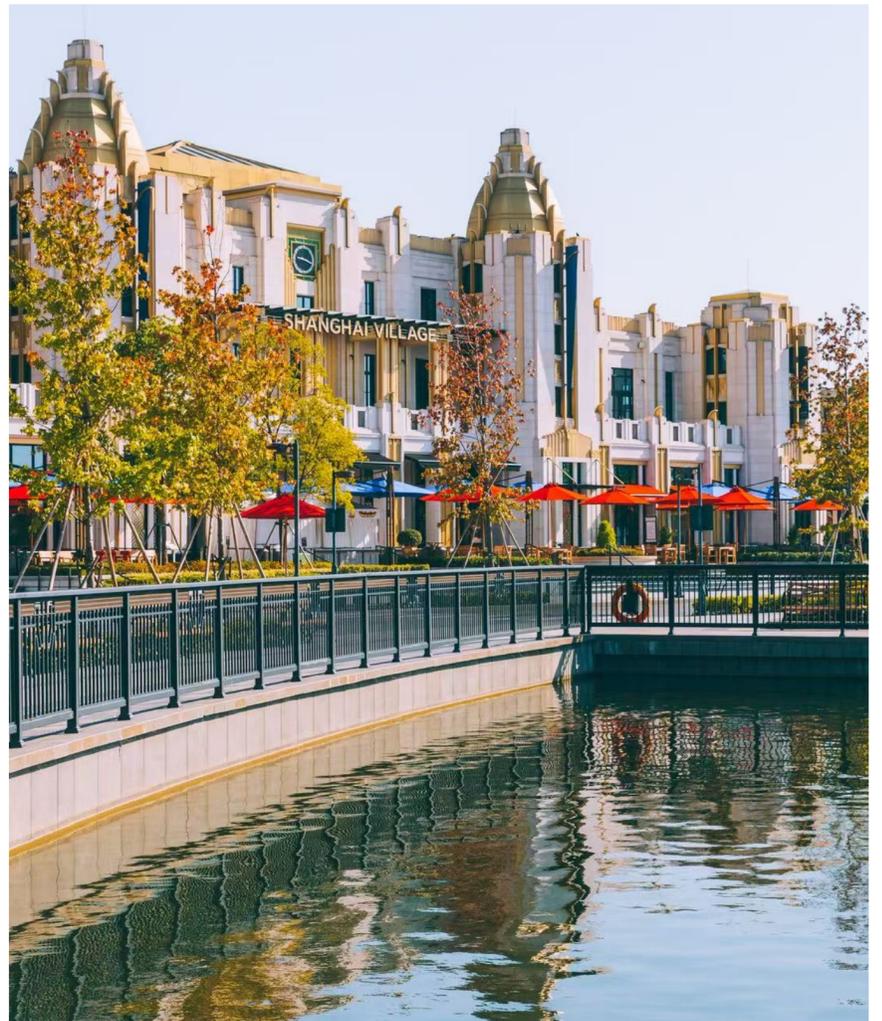

Shanghai Disney Land

Shanghai Disneyland is a great choice for thrill-seekers and fans of unique attractions like TRON Lightcycle Power Run and Pirates of the Caribbean: Battle for the Sunken Treasure. It delivers a distinctive Disney experience infused with Chinese cultural elements.

FOOD, BARS & CLUBS

FOOD, BARS & CLUBS

There is no end to the choice of food in Shanghai whether Chinese or Western.

For Chinese food, Shanghainese cuisine itself is typically very sweet and saucy, but here every kind of Chinese food is available.

From the west comes a lot of spice with the spicy numbing flavours of Sichuan, the fire of a Chongqing hotpot and the fragrant and spicy Hunan cuisine.

Dongbei food from the north is known for its hearty stews, noodles and abundant vegetables.

Cantonese, and dim sum, hail from the southern province of Guangzhou and is best known for its roast meats, stir fries, rice dishes and congees.

French and Italian are the main influences of western food here, with no shortage of burgers and bbq.

Over the past few years there has been a surge of bakeries and coffee chains that you will no doubt observe in multiple locations.

You can search for basic information and guest rating via "DianPing" app.

XIAO LONG BAO

Many people come to Shanghai specifically to eat the famous soup dumplings, locally called Xiao Long Bao (小笼包). These little dumplings are steamed and filled with a tasty mix of flavor and soup.

Many of the best Xiao Long Bao spots are holes-in-the-wall style places often with a queue at peak meal times.

How to eat:

Pick up the dumpling and place it on your spoon.

Position it so the loose bit of soft wrapper hangs off the top edge of the spoon and bite a little off. Then with your newly opened dumpling suck out the soup before it spills, but be careful they can be hot!

Finish the rest off in one bite.

Its tradition to serve these with vinegar and sliced ginger strips.

DIN TAI FENG 鼎泰丰

Now a global brand, DinTaiFeng is still the best eaten in Shanghai.
